January 20-21, 2018

Ever wondered whether you have told your stories as effectively as you can?

Or perhaps think that you might have issues with timing?

Have you ever heard a story that struck you so funny or profound that you've remembered the event for years?

Our collective need to hear and tell stories is what ties all of us together.

Each person has a wealth of experiences to draw from and in this highly interactive session, you will learn how to share your individual spirit with others to create a memorable environment for effective learning; and have a lasting impact on others when you tell a story in a compelling fashion so that it strikes close to home in the participant's heart and mind. No matter what kind of presentations you give, telling stories is a crucial element when it comes to making your point and connecting with your audience.
